C.P. MORGAN PROVIDES KINDERVISION® PERSONAL SAFETY INFORMATION TO INDIANA SCHOOLS

November 2005 In the interest of protecting children from harm, C.P. Morgan, a national homebuilder, has partnered with KinderVision to provide select schools in the metropolitan Indianapolis and greater Lafayette communities with KinderVision school materials. Dedicated to eliminating the abduction and exploitation of children, the KinderVision Foundation has created grade appropriate school units that empower students to recognize dangerous circumstances and to respond appropriately. The school kits will be distributed during November to thirty-four elementary schools, nineteen middle schools, five intermediate schools, and sixteen high schools in C.P. Morgan communities throughout the state. All materials will be provided free to the schools.

“C.P. Morgan is pleased to assist KinderVision in providing this important educational tool to area schools,” said Scott Bowers, C.P. Morgan Corporate Director of Governmental and Community Affairs.

“The generosity of C.P. Morgan in providing this critical safety information to schools will protect children for years to come,” added Douglas Sebastian, KinderVision Founder.

Kindervision is a unique educational program which provides valuable safety information to children from toddler through college age. KinderVision believes that education is the most effective way to protect children from those who would harm them. For more information on KinderVision programs and services, visit
